FROM THE PUBLISHER

WELCOME to the premiere issue of Skytrain Station Magazine. Everyone knows the fastest and least expensive way to get around Metro Vancouver is by skytrain. However, with over 40 stations to choose from, which ones do you choose? Even if you live in Metro Vancouver, it takes time to discover all the possibilities. If you are a tourist, well, you can see the challenges. So, to make the journey easier, we have created 40 magazines for 40 stations, each one telling you what you will find when you arrive at each destination. But we don't stop there. We let you know what you will find near the stations as well. We tell you the closest station to everything! Well, not quite everything it's only a 50 page magazine but we do our best along with our advertising partners. Most of our advertisers you will see on skytrain billboards as well on the platforms as you move from station to station. They're the ones who want to be seen and for you to find them, so keep your eyes open. If you see them on more than one board, that means they really want to be seen so check them out first.

Besides local businesses you will find at each station, some stations are embarkation points for an exciting day trip out into the country or even across the water such as Tsawwassen where you can catch the ferry to Vancouver Island. Or, Steveston Village, Ladner Village, White Rock, all to the south of Vancouver. To the north, you find Horseshoe Bay, Bowen Island, Grouse Mountain and Deep Cove and the magazines will tell you which station to go to, to catch a bus to a particular destination.

It's been quite awhile since Vancouver started transforming itself from a sleepy fishing village on the west coast of Canada into the jet set metropolis it is today. You can still see remnants of the Old Vancouver around if you know what to look for, heritage buildings, older more distinct neighbourhoods. But, it is still in a state of change. New skyscrapers are going up and mile-high condo towers on the water are sites to watch out for as you travel around the city. We point the big ones out in many of our magazines. Do you know, developers couldn't build higher than three stories until after the late sixties when Vancouver's first lady developer introduced the Strata Titles Act in Chinatown, which later became the Condominium Act. Her name was Faye Leung and she was one of Vancouver's larger than life characters. You can read about her in the only book ever written about her in our online library using the QR code on the front cover of the magazines.

We hope you enjoy Skytrain Station Magazine and that it helps educate you about our great city!
